Exile Pledges More Terrorism

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A militant Cuban exile organization served notice that it will continue anti-Castro terrorists activities despite restrictions imposed by U.S. authorities.

Felipe Rivero, head of the Cuban Nationalist Association, told a news conference he and 12 associates were ordered by U.S. immigration officials not to leave their home metropolitan areas.

"We are reorganizing the association, and we'll continue the fight," Rivero, a Bay of Pigs invasion veteran, declared.

Rivero said, "Terrorism, there is no other road left for us than that. Moscow will feel it. Our only objective is liberation of Cuba."

Rivero said he was not told the reason for travel restrictions but added, "Probably that firecracker we placed at the auction house in Montreal scared them."
